With the technological evolution set in motion with the advancing “data-driven economy”, the importance of personal data as relevant assets to business has increased substantially, affecting the decision-making process of companies in different market sectors. The relevance of this matter has increased specially with the entry into force of the Brazilian General Law of Protection of Personal Data (LGPD), reinforcing the need to ensure the adequate management of the collected personal data.

Our Cybersecurity and Data Privacy team is therefore an ally in the development of this ecosystem, being responsible for addressing the various demands in connection to data protection matters. With specialized professionals in the matter and frequently in contact with the National Data Protection Authority (ANPD), besides other administrative authorities, such as Public Ministry, SENACON, and PROCONs, our team works on several fronts.

Our professionals have an advantage in the market for providing services of excellence, contributing to the development of our clients’ business allied to the requirements outlined in the applicable regulation. We also have a close interaction with several sector groups of the firm, providing a comprehensive and multidisciplinary assistance with any interdisciplinary development to the presented cases.
